COCO PEAT AND MULCH

Coco peat and coco mulch both come from coconut fiber, but they differ in use and texture.

COCO PEAT:

- Fine, lightweight texture (short fibers / substrate-like);
- Mainly used as a growing medium or soil amendment;
- Excellent water retention and promotes root development;
- Commonly used in greenhouses, horticulture, seed starting, or potting mixes.

COCO MULCH:

- Coarser texture (long fibers, chunks);
- Used as a top layer on the soil surface;
- Helps reduce evaporation and suppress weeds;
- Protects soil from temperature fluctuations and erosion.

Coco peat works within the soil as a substrate, while coco mulch acts on the surface as a protective layer.

Also available in bulk on pallets:

a practical and eco-friendly option that helps reduce waste and handling.
980-MulchV and 975-PeatV.

One 4.5 kg (9.9 lb) block of either Coco mulch or Coco peat will produce, once the water is absorbed, 3 cubic feet of mulch, the equivalent of a 56 liter bag of cedar mulch weighing nearly 30 lbs.
